CAIRO, Oct. 20 (NYT) .- Anwar Sadat, the new Egyptian president, told this correspondent last night that, "if the United States were not hehlnd the Israeli expansion drive, the whole question of the Arab-Israeli conflict would be solved hy the Jarring mission within 24 hours."

In the first interview he has granted to any newspaperman since assuming office, the 51year-old chief of state made the following points:

 The Egyptian armed forces have been "aierted" because of the present tense situation. Nevertheless, Cairo is prepared to agree to extending the present cease-fire for one period of 90 days if Israel cents the terms originally laid down by U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers in his peace initiative.

 However, Washington would also have to halt the dispatch of further arms to Israel during the cease-fire-except for fulfillment of pledges made by the Johnson administration.

· Cairo, however, will not agree to the removal of any SAM missiles now stationed in the Suez Canal zone even if the Israelis dismantle some of their fortifications on the other side of the canal,

He described the goal of his government as "socialism," even though this has not yet been attained, but he did not define his conception of that ideology. He said there were no differences among the Egyptian lead-ers as had been reported "by the American press."

The president continually linked Israel with the United States and said it had been "planted here" in order to carry out American purposes. He recalled that four years ago he met U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk in Washington and "we hoth agreed on the fact that there is nothing between us and the United States except this problem of Israel." He then complained that "you are using Israel as your instrument in the area, Israel always waits for a green light from Washington,"

He said he had first heen convinced of this when the Is-raelis staged a big raid on Gaza in 1955 after Cairo had declined to join the U.S.-sponsored Baghdad Pact and sald this eventually led to Egypt's arms deal with the Soviet bloc.

He denounced the United States for helping Israel to oc-cupy Egyptian territory and provide it with money and arms and he insisted that no new arms could be sent to Israel if there was any thought of resuming the Jarring talks.

Despite his stern warnings addressed both to the American and the Israell governments, Mr. Sadat nevertheless repeated that his government still stands by the pledge accepted by Egypt through the UN resolution to recognize Israel "as a state" and allow its ships free passage through the Sucz Canal in a political settlement based on toration of the fr fore the 1967 war.

He expressed the view that Israel was quite unwilling to accept the frontiers specified in that resolution. He did not himself close the door to "minor rectifications" but thought that such an approach was obviously excluded by the Israeli govern-ment and that this view had been confirmed in recent statements by Israel'e leaders.

Permitted Refugees To Enter Manchuria

TORYO, Oct. 20 (AP) .- Funeral services were held here yesterday for a Japanese gen-eral who made it possible for 20,000 stranded and freezing Jews, fleeing Nazi Germany, to cross, the Siberian border and enter Manchuria.

The rites were held by the Japan-Israel Society in honor of Lt. Gen. Kilchiro Hignehi, 82, who died in Tokyo on Society officials said that Gen. Higuchi allowed the Jews to enter Manchuria in February, 1928, without getting clearance from his headquarters, in response to an urgent plea from members of a Jewish club in

They said that Gen. Higuchi took the prompt arbitrary action because he had reports that 20 of the Jews had frozen to death and that many of the lightly clad Jews were facing certain death from the hitter sub-zero Siberian winter.

Gen Higuchi, the officials said, also felt that the Jews, who were former Frankfurt residents. were unwanted by both the Soviet Union and Japan because of the two countries' "delicate" relations with Nazi Germany. They said that Gen. Higuchi was later summoned for an explanation by Gen. Hideki Tojo, then chief of staff of Japan's Kwantung Army that controlled Manchuris. The Jews, who were forced to live in the open in an internment camp in the Siberian border town of Otpor, were transported to Manchuria aboard 13 trains arranged by Gen. Higuchi, the

A Fateful Hour for Canada-and the U.S.

The murder of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte confirms not only the despicable character of his killers, the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ), but also the necessity of the extraordinary steps Canada has taken to pursue them. Even before Mr. Laporte's bloody and bound body was discovered on Sunday. Prime Minister Trudeau had suspended civil libertles and committed his government to a relentless police-army campaign against the FLQ's "insurrection." Parliamentary and public support for his unprecedented decision had been assured; it will be more widely and deeply forthcoming now. For there appears to be nearly universal agreement that the FLQ poses a head-on challenge to the integrity of the Canadian government and to Canadian democracy alike, and that the two must be defended with all the resources that the free people of Canada can muster. This feeling is all the stronger for Prime Minister Trudeau's own unquestioned devotion to Canada's libertarian traditions, and for the evident fact that Queoec separatism in its non-violent form was a!ready being treated politically, legally and culturally within the system. Indeed one wonders whether the FLQ's desperation did not arise from a perception that the system was working too well: Nothing is so dangerous as a fanatic who believes his cause is being peacefully

The question of the moment is, of course, whether the government with its new emergency powers will be able to catch the murderers and their accomplices, who still hold a second hostage. British diplomat James Cross. At this point, one can only reply that If the government fails, more than its own prestige, and more than the life of Mr. Cross, may be lost. For it is the terrorlsts' purpose, as Mr. Trudeau well understands, to orovoke the government into repressive measures that will enrage or alarm its ordinary citizens. This is why, by the way, we would be extremely surprised if the kidnappers took up Mr. Trudeau's offer to release Mr. Cross in return for safe conduct to Cuba for themselves and five of their jailed mates whose prison sentences are nearly expired. To accept amnesty would be to relieve the government of by far the greater part of the pressure whose application was the point of the FLQ exercise in the first place. In this regard, we wonder if Mr. Laporte's murder was committed out of the FLQ's panic at being pursued by the police, or out of a decision to tighten up its credibility, which had sagged during its week of unsuccessful negotiations with the Americans can scarcely look across the border at Canada's travails-and at our own fermeot-without asking themselves whether a similar dilemma, growing out of similar acts of terrorism, might come to pass here.

At the very least, one conclusion is immediately clear: So important are atmosphere and example in nourishing the minds of those who commit such acts that the United States has a large stake in how Canada emerges from its current agony. Whatever may be the possibility of political kidnappings in this country, unquestionably it would be a larger threat if Canada had caved in to the FLQ. For that much, we have much to be grateful for in Canada's example. However, if Canada loses its struggle against the FLQ, by ultimate capitulation to the terrorists or by a demonstrated inability to deal with them effectively. then a major defeat will have been sustained by democratic forces, and not just in Canada

It is a measure of our times, and a frightening one, that Americans find themselves burdened with such questions as how to prevent political kidnapping and whether tn bargain with kidnappers and whether to suspend the rule of law in a given emergency. Perhaps any answers offered in the vacuum of anticipation, before the event is real, are bound to be misleading. Yet the Canadian experience, if it proves anything at all so far, underlines the absolute need for a democratic government to act in defense of

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Hanoi's 'Nyet'

Hanoi's formal rejection of President Nixon's peace initiative is a cause for disappointment, not despair. Ambassador Bruce's refusal to take no for an answer was the proper response. Both sides have now publicly belittled the other's new public proposals. But both have also upgraded their negotiating teams; they give evidence of having more important aims than simply taking advantage of propaganda opportunitles in Paris. Intensive probing in private is now in order to discover whether progress toward a settlement can be made.

A beginning of such probing can be seen in the initial responses of each side to the other's proposals, While Mr. Nixon's fivepoint plan was a gem of clarity by comparlson with the npaque nuances in the Viet Cong's latest eight-point scheme, both documents conceal far more than they reveal about the kind of deal either side would entertain to end the war. To reject such a document as containing nothing new is, in effect, to ask the other side to explain more clearly what concessions It is really nffering as against previous positions.

Heretofore, neither side was willing to propose or discuss a cease-fire, although a halt to the killing is an essential element in any settlament. Now, both sides have formally proposed to negotiate the "modalities" of a truce. Hanol's representatives pretend that Mr. Nixon has proposed an immediate cease-fire, followed by negotiation of a political settlement and arrangements for American withdrawal. They insist that these two "fundamental" issues must be settled in principle before there can be a cease-fire.

But, as Ambassador Bruce undoubtedly will make clear, Mr. Nixon dld not propose an immediate de facto cease-fire. He seeks a negotiation on the military, political, economic and territorial arrangements that must be agreed between the two sides before a standstill cease-fire can come intn effect.

If the Communists insist on negotiating the two "fundamental" issues of a political aettlement and American withdrawal before hostilitles stop, they will find the United States agreeable. But they cannot expect American agreement to their political and Island" and was never published. military proposals in advance of a negotlation. If they do, it will be evident to all the world that their objective, as Hanol has just restated publicly, is "complete victory" not a compromise settlement.

Many other points need probing. The Viet Cong proposal asks American with- and even the president admits that drawal in nine months. But just last Decem-ber the Viet Cong proposed American with-itself "Socialist" this credo has yet drawal in six months. The withdrawal date is clearly negotiable, as are the truce conditions the Communists propose to govern tion is bow he will fill Nasser's the withdrawal period.

President Nixon has offered immediately to fix a timetable for American withdrawal -authoritatively stated by White House press briefers as 12 months-to take effect after a negotiated settlement is agreed, glamorous Franklin D. Roosevelt. Negotlations in private could well open on this issue, which would include the conditions of a standstill cease-fire. An exchange of maps showing the areas each side claims to control would be a useful starting point even if, as is probable, both sides claim the bulk of the country.

If the two sides want to negotiate, they will have no difficulty finding points of conjunction in the two peace plans on which to start. The American desire for serious negotiations can no longer be challenged, ing four years in a concentration But the attitudes of Hanoi and Saigon are iess certain. Hanoi, in particular, has yet tn show readiness to negntiate at all. With American withdrawal under way, North Vietnam may prefer to bide its time, resume allout war at a more propitious moment and strive for total victory, delusive as that course is for either side.

For the United States, the moment now is one for persistence in seeking private talks, plus flexibility and patience. The ground has been laid for a wide-ranging solitary confinement. When I was negotiation in which no proposal of either side would be denied thorough examination. Difficult American decisions will have to be made if such talks begin. The other major influence on his intellectual formation was Caliph Omar, Sadat says, Omar followed Abu Bakr as second successor to the Prophet Mohammed in Islam's leadership. "He was notable for justness and strictness," explains the deeply religious president

Actor at the Helm of the Comédie-Française

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Oct. 20.—Pierre Dux, one of France's most distinguished sciors, was recently appointed administrator of the Comédie-Française and dynamic changes at the House of Molière, often under fire for being too tradition-bound, are predicted.

Mr. Dux has held this post before-for a brief span at the end of World War II-but ln 1946 he resigned and went forth to seek his fortunes on the nonsubsidized stage. There he has been displaying his versatility for two decades, establishing a sound reputation as a flawless performer and director.

He has been seen in such diverse offerings as the translation of the American "Absence of a Cello" (locally known as "Mal de Teste"), which ran for three seasons, and Paul Valery's only play, 'Mon Faust," a literary event of the postwar Parislen theater. He revealed start inc transformation powers in Marcel Achard's "Patate" in which he impersonated a non-U, grousing ne'er-do-well intent on reducing an old school chum who had prospered to his own dreary level. Tall, elegant.

exuding a mundane good breeding, Mr. Dux—without resorting to makeup but by sheer force of histrionic artistry turned himself into the grubby, spiteful failure. "Patate" ran for seven years. Mr. Dux is also one of the age's outstanding Cyrapos

It has been rumered that the Comedie-Française intends to follow the line of the Theatre National Populaire, that it is now out, it a word, to capture the "popular" audience.

Topular'

Mr. Dux chuckled as he sat at his Louis XVI desk in the sombre, tradition-hallowed administration office of the national theater.
"Popular." he said. "Well, there are more meanings than one to the word. Of course, we want to be popular, but we don't want to change the audience—we have our faithful subscribers and our regulars among the students and among the visitors from all over the world-we just want to enlarge it. There are many Frenchmen and Freuchwomen, a large body of Parisians even, who have never been to the Comédie-Française. They regard it with awe-as something too formal and grave. We would like to enlist them as theater goers to prove to them that the living stage can provide something that movies and television do not.

"We are experimenting with different measures. This autumn we interrupted the repertory system temporarily by playing 'Cyrano' each night for a week. But there were com-plaints. Many foreigners spend only a few days here and want to see more than one of our productions. Another problem is that often a certain piece in the repertory proves more popular than the others. Despite this we are obliged to alternate it with the other plays for boxoffice receipts are not our criterion and must not become

Introducing Authors

"This season we are introducing two authors into the repertory who have never been played here before," said Mr. Dux with some pride. "Jean Anouilh will make his debut at the Français with his Becket which he will direct, and Strindberg's 'Oream Play' will be produced by Raymond Rou-

"Then we will have a series of three programs devoted to avant-garde authors. The first, in November, consists of Romain Weingarten's 'Comme la Pierre.' Roland Dubiliard's 'Si cois Billetdoux's Femmes Paralleles.' The second, in January, of Robert Pinget's 'Architruc, Guy Foissy's 'Cœur à Deux' and Andrée Chedid's 'Le Montreur.' The third, in March, will be composed of René de Obaldia's Le Général Inconnu.' Jean-Claude Grumberg's 'Rire' and Gabriel Cou-sin's La Descente sur Récife," These plays will be given special performances, but will not be entered in the repertory.

The initial presentation of the Dux ragime marks an admirable start, generously offering two productions—Alfred de Musset's "Il ne Faut Jurer de Rien" and Molière's "George Dandin"-on the same program.

The De Musset selection is delightfully played for the amusing romantic romp it is, a breezy, exquisite fable, airy and delicious. In its current resurrection the silken light touch has been applied and retained, scampering through the charming text, the fanciful decor, the quaint costuming, the fluid movement and the spirited performance.

"George Dandin," an excellent choice for contrast, is a tragedy disguised as a comedy. It very probably discloses a partial self-portrait of its author in its "hero," the cuckolded husband who must-after some frantic wriggling-resign himself to his pitiful fate.

Jean-Paul Roussillon, appreciating the dark profundity of the play, has staged it in sinister shadows, but he has not subdued its passages of buffconery in which Dandin begs his haughty in-laws to intervene. Robert Hirsch, as the tormented yokel, succeeds in providing a Dandin who is both funny and

BUDAPEST. Oct. 20.—Bela Bartok's three one act theater works make a natural triple bill for the Hungarian State Opera, ao it was deubly natural that they should get new productions during the current Budapest Art Weeks whose major theme this year is the commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the composer's

But these new versions have to compete with their freshly remembered predecessors, which for several years formed one of the company's showpieces, not only here but on frequent tours. In particular the classical simplicity of Kalman Nadasdy's staging of the opera "Bluebeard's Castle" and the powerful realism of Gyula Harangozo'a choreography for "The Miracu-lous Mandarin" are tough acts

Clearly, a new look and a different approach were in order. In "Bluebeard," Andras M'ko, the state opera's chief stage director, and his designer, Gabor Forray, opted for literal visual reinforcement of the inner drama that unfolds in Bartok's richly colored orchestra.

The gloom and dankness of the castle, and of Bluebeard's solitary soul, is almost tangible in Forray's basic set. And as Judith opens each symbolic door the stage is filled with the quallty of light called for in the libretto and with the things Judith sees—the forture instruments, the weapons, the jewels and the blood-tinged flowers. But for the vision of Bluebeard's all-encompassing realm and the lake of tears it is the orchestra that inevitably takes

In general the staging and scenery confine themselves to objectively presenting the opera's symbols, providing an outward action to parallel the real action in the orchestra, and moving its two almost static characters against the backdrop of the one real character—the castle that symbolizes the solitary man's soul. One touch not specifically suggested in the text was a kind of perforated partition, behind which Judith retired at the end to share with Bluebeard's other wives the fate of being close but in-

Veiled Bealism

His approach seems to have been to vell the outward realism and eroticism of the story with a moderate amount of stylization, symbolism and acrobatic choreography. Some of Seregi's solutions seemed gratuitous, but the tremendous vitality of the dancing—especially by Zoltan Nagy as the mandarin and Lilla Partay as the girl-carried its own conviction.

The stylization was sugges ed at the outset in Forray's a with only sparse suggestions an urban tenement. NEW YORK. Oct. 20.-One new show opened on Broad-way last week to one negative and three positive reviews. "The Rothschilds," at the

Lunt-Fontanne Theater, directed by Michael Kidd, is based on a best-selling biography of the family by Frederic Morton. The show traces the rise of Mayer Rothschild and his five sons from a . Frankfurt ghetto to an international financial dynasty. "A lavish musical about wealth that relentlessly squanders its potential," chides William Glover of the Associated Press. The characters, he says, are "paper cutouts," with the exception of Paul Hecht ("reasonably possible") as Na-than Rothschild, and Keene Curtis who "adds admirable epicene malevolence" to the United Press International, The Washington Post and The New York Times reviewers were more favorably "A solid dramatic impressed. musical with considerable emotional appeal," wrote Jack Gaver of UPI. The Post reviewer Richard Coe appraised: "Unswervingly old - fashioned, tuneful and lavish, The Rothschilds' will prove a vastly popular New York musical." which jibed with The Times' Clive Barnes's: "Take a good Jewish family like the Rothschilds, throw in music by Jerry Rock, lyrics by Sheldon Harnick (the "Fiddler on the Roof" team) and a literate and engrossing book and you should have a hit. Lerstwhile "fifth Beatle," surveys the contemporary pop scene from a brand new suite. of recording studios overlooking Oxford Circus. In the course of a champagne opening, Martin, as chairman of AIR (Associated Independent Recordings, Ltd.), looked back affectionately upon his career as the Beatles' musical director and ahead to "the next Pied Piper," He thinks a new Pied Piper is about due; but he has no idea who it will be, or what kind of music he will be piping. Neither does anybody else.

He didn't recognize the Beatles as Pied Pipers when they auditioned for him at the ENT studios in St. John's Wood, on June 6, 1962. But he liked the sound, and he liked the boys. And he did what no other record producer had seen fit to do. He signed them up, not for EMI, but for EMI's popular music subsidiary, Perlophone.

Recording Session

The first recording session, on Sept. 11, 1962, produced an exchange which illustrated the startling contrast between Martin and the Beatles. It showed, too, why it is hard to think of Martin even as a "fifth" Beatle. Before the session started, he explained the recording routine.

And small wonder. As Hunter Davies puts it in his book, "The Beatles," "George Martin always seems light-years away from the Beatles in class, taste and background. He is tall and handsome in a matinee-idol sortof way, with a studied prepschool master manner and a clipped BBC accent."

All true; but he dresses better—and rather more squarely—than most schoolmasters do. He could easily pass for the political counselor at a British embassy. That tie, incidentally, was black with red horses on it, and came from Liberty's. Martin liked it very much. Cther Surprises

There were other surprises at that first session, ha remem-bers: "The boys were all playing acoustic guitar, which was the only instrument they knew anything about. When I went to the piano to illustrate an idea. John Lennon looked over my shoulder at the keyboard, trying to figure out the chord. Finally he said: 'I see, it's my D shape.

Your D what?' I asked. "'My D shape, said John, playing a D chord on his guitar. "It suddenly dawned on me that John-and the other boys, too, at that time-identified chords by the shapes formed by their fingers on the guitar frets."

The George Martin associa-tion with the Beatle, has entered musical history as the prototype of the classically musician (Guildhall School of Music and Drama) working with an unlettered pop group to achieve a hitherto unprecedented sophistication and

It all began not with the Beatles learning to read music but with George Martin learning to play guitar. If they couldn't talk about music to hirs in his language, he would have to learn to talk to them in theirs. He's glad, now, that he did it that way, and cretty sure that a conventional musical education would have crushed the Beatles.

"It was a two-way street," he recalls. They learned a lot from me, and I learned a lot from them. They're marvelous musicians. really, not in an academic sense, of course, but in terms of musicallty, sensitivity, perception, invention, ideas,

Keyser Ullmann

"A secure foundation for future expansion and profitability" Edward du Cenn - Chaliman.

Extracts from Chairman's circulated statamant I am honoured to succeed Mr. Charles M.

Keyser as Chairman and I hope we shall continue to chart a path of davelopment and staady progress during the years ahead. The period of statutory dividend limitation having ended wa have thought it appropriate tn increase the final dividand payment by 2% making 131% for the year (122% last year). Last year we suffered a slight interruption of our progress, our banking profits being a little below last year's record figures, meinly dua to difficult conditions ruling in the international markets in which we are steadily developing our business. I have no doubt that the deciaions to widen furthar the range of our international activities will result in increased profitability.

Our non-banking profits before taxation and minority interests were 13.9% higher - after taxation and minority interests the amount artributable to shareholders was 5.6% down.

The banking subsidiary has continued to devalop. The growth of our sterling lending was again restricted by Government but we are continuing to seek opportunities to increase our foreign currency lending. A madium term loan bank is being formed in partnership with five major American banks. This should bagin trading later in the current financial year. Our Swiss banking subsidiary, Keyser Ullmann S.A. in Ganeva, which opened for business in August 1969 has prograssed satisfactorily and according to plan.

The development of the investment managamant department is procaeding, and we have recently acquired Capital Life Assurance Society Limited. Those sections of our business concerned with corporate finance and advice to industrial companies have been busy and our experience in the new issue, merger and industrial advisory fields is in increasing demand.

There is a prudent limit to the pace at which devalopment can be undertaken. Nonethelass, we regard 88ch of these moves as baing in aum tha establishment of a secura foundation for future expansion and profitability.

CLARIFICATION

=2 Granco has adnounced that for the time being no new sales nor re-demptions of greent heldings will be occupied far either of the funds listed.

GRAMCO-UNITED STATES INVESTMENT FUND UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND

Recent newspaper articles about Gramco Management Ltd. have incorrectly referred to its off-shore real estate fund as United States Investment Fund. Pursuant to an agreement dated December 18, 1968. Gramco undertook to refrain from using the name United States Investment Fund, in order to avoid confusion with United States Trust Investment Fund, and to use instead the name USIF Real Estate Fund.

This is to clarify that there is no connection whatsoever between any fund sponsored or operated by Gramco and United States Trust Investment Fund. The United States Trust Investment Fund, incorporated in Luxembourg, is sponsored by the United States Trust Company of New York, which was founded in 1853, and which currently supervises investments of about 11-billion-dollar assets for individuals, institutions and corporations.

Registered Office: 14 Roe Aldringer,

NOTICE TO SHAREHOLDERS OF

UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND

The quorum required by law not having been met at the Extraordinary General Meeting of Shareholders held on October 19th, 1970, the shareholders of our company are invited to take part in a Second Extraordinary General Meeting which will be held at the registered office of the company in Luxembourg, 14 Rue Aldringer, on November 23rd, 1970, at 11 o'clock a.m. with the following agenda:

- Approval of an agreement between UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND and MAD INTERNATIONAL FUND under which
- a) MAD INTERNATIONAL FUND will subscribe for shares of UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND in an amount equal to the total net asset value of MAD INTERNATIONAL FUND at the per share net asset value of the shares of UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND as determined pursuant to the valuation provisions of Article 23 of the Articles of Incorporation of UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND, all such shares to be fully paid in cash by MAD INTERNATIONAL FUND.
- b) UNITED STATES TRUST INVESTMENT FUND will purchase and MAD INTERNATIONAL FUND will sell the securities in the portfolio of MAD INTER-NATIONAL FUND at a price equal to the market value of such securities to be determined pursuant to the valuation provisions contained in Article 17 of the Articles of Incorporation of MAD INTER-NATIONAL FUND.
- 2) Approval of a proposal of the Directors based on the general purpose and ultimate result of the subscription as outlined above, not to exercise the right of the Fund to exclude holding by any shareholder of more than 5% of the shares of the Fund.
- 3) Amendment of the last paragraph of Article 14 of the Articles of Incorporation to add the following:
  "In the event that in any meeting the number of votes
  "for and against a resolution shall be equal, the Chair-"man shall have a casting vote."
- Appointment of four additional directors to the Board of Directors of the Corporation.
- Confirmation of the authority of the Board of Directors to issue additional sbares within the authorized capital for a further five-year period.

The shareholders are hereby informed that this Second Extraordinary General Meeting shall, pursuant to article 67 of the Company law of 10th August, 1915, validly deliberate whatever portion of the share capital of the company will be present or represented.

In accordance with Luxembourg law, resolutions on item 3) will be subject to a majority of 2.'3 of the shares represented at the meeting. Resolutions on the other items of the agenda will be subject to vote by a majority of the shares represented at the meeting. The directors propose that resolutions on all items other than item 3), although not subject to the same majority requirements. be only voted together and subject to an affirmative vote on resolution 3).

In order to attend the meeting, holders of bearer shares should deposit their shares on or before 19th November. 1970, with the following banks.

In the case of registered shoraholders proxies should be deposited at the registered office of the Fund on or before 19th November, 1970.

A situation that is obscure for many players arises when an opening suit bid is doubled and the opener's partner jumps in a new sult. There is no general agreement about the meaning of such a bid. According to partnership style it may be pre-emptive, encouraging or forcing. Most American experts prefer the pre-emptive treatment, in which case the East hand shown in the diagram is too strong. A pre-emptive jump would he appropriate if the hand did not contain the diamond ace.

It will be seen that East-West cannot be defeated in four hearts, and that four spades will make for North-South unless the defense is East's opportunity to good, jump to two hearts arose hecause North ventured a rather eccentric take-put double, Lacking support for hearts, most North players following a one-diamond bid would pass, while a few would overcall in spades. East's decision to jump in hearts did not prevent South from bidding spades. West naturally raised hearts to the three-level, and North had to decide how far to go in spades. As South would bid two spades with any mod-erate hand, the jump to game was on the optimistic side.

West led the beart ace and East's play to this trick was crucial for the defense. The appearance of a singleton heart in the dummy makes it clear that a heart continuation cannot be desirable, so suit preference situation

For this purpose the trump suit is disregarded. A high card asks for the high-ranking side-suit, and a low card for the low-ranking side-suit. It is always advisable to signal as clearly as possible, so East made the dramatic play of the heart king.

This showed a very strong destre for a diamond shift and West obeyed orders. He led the diamond three at the second trick and his partner won with the ace and continued. East's diamond ruff on the third round of the suit gave the defense the fourth trick and defeated the contract.

HERE are all 347 of the series of gravures tetchings, dry points, aquatints, etc.), already famous, that Picasso began on March 16 and concluded on Oct. 5, 1968, just three weeks before his 87th birthday. To scan the two volumes page by page is like watching an old, old acrobat go through his paces with undiminished alacrity. Such hand-springs, backflips, somersaults and cartwheels you never saw.

Picasso is the only artist in the history of the world who has been able to perform simultaneously on the trampoline and the horizontal bars, and he is still the gymnastic champ when scored on the standard bases of form, execution, and difficulty of optional exercises. His full repertoire, including the 347 set, is summarized in the cur-rent exhibition of his prints at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

A few artists who lived to be very old men have produced in their old age their most pro-foundly reflective work. The golden reverles of Giovanni Bellini's last paintings and the spir-itual ardor of Titian's could never have been foreseen in their youth and middle age. Artists like Renoir, whose plump, pink young girls turned into great swollen earth goddesses bathed in strawberry juice, attain in old age a generic apo-theosis of their youthful ideals. This cannot be said of Picasso, unless you think he has never been anything but an acrobat, an indefensible contention.

As for the rest, old artists merely dry up. Picasso certainly has not dried up, as both the quantity and the juiciness of these gravures show. Making his own rules as he has done all his life, Picasso in old age proves that it is possible for an artist to turn out great quantities of work in which he seems to repeat himself, but to do so without the staleness that should be the natural corollary.

He has, of course, provided himself with a vast file of motifs and graphic devices for repetition and recombination at this stage of the game. No other artist has been so prolific in the invention and variation of personal styles and moods, a list. that some researchers have di- of ugly tortured lines of vided into 85 periods.

In these gravures, Picasso's . hand now responds to this filethe motifs and manners seem literally to "come to hand"with the fluency and enthusiasm of an amateur pornographer executing a hasty phallic scribble on a wall, to which some of the subject matter bears a Mr. Canaday is arrhigh-spirited kinship. Not quite : The New York Times.

all the gravures are crotic, though some are erot enough to have been with from exhibition in Par and Chicago and to he given the set a deforming i toriety. There are no titles, a Picasso, never having explain the symbolism or iconograph of any of his works, offers explanations for these. 2 from the first plate, which the most elaborately develop of the lot, no one familiar wi the general story of Picasa life and art can avoid read the series as a kind of ant biography—spiritual and esth

tic rather than factual. Caricatured as anything from a peasant to a satur and tat ing part sometimes as a per former, frequently as an on looker, and finally as a voyen to sexual bouts. Picasso himsel pops up time and time again It is obvious that every detail flows from the artist's reservoir of emotional associations, in which the events of his life and the manner of his art are totally fused. Among the odalisques, circus people, charioteers, harlequins, painters in their studios, and nymphs and satyrsall those characters with whom we have commingled for so long thanks to Picasso's entree

there are figures evoking his friends and lovers.

The erotic theme grows stronger as the series progresses and culminates in a group of variations on the subject of an artist recognizable as Raphael abandoning work on a painting on his easel for a session of fornication with his model. It is here that Picasso introduce: himself as the voyeur, later re placed by a churchman bearin the insignia of highest rank These pictures are hilarious be Picasso's intention—hilarity the only virtue that can be de pended upon to transform por nography into art - although there is a certain associati poignance in view of their a thorship.

In other subjects, Picasso jt taposes images of handson clean-bodied young male nu-with squat, hairy, wrink! sag-bellied naked old men. 7 youths are drawn in his purclassical linear style; the men are depicted in the mas style Picasso invented to down the horrors of, for stance. ## Letter to the Sports Editor

In regard to your article about the golf in Saint-Nom-la-Bretèche (IHT, Oct. 17), I think you should have explained to Mr. (Arpold) Palmer that it will be a rather difficult task to try to make golf become a national sport in France. I am sure yon are well aware why only certain people here in France are interested in golf.

I am a foreigner and a very keen golfer, too. But here I am not able to play golf except for a few times during the months of August and September when the golf club of St.-Cloud had mercy nn me and allowed me to play there for 15 francs per day. Normally, it is 35 francs and on Sundays 75. These fees are more or less the same around the Paris golf courses. To become a member -if you are ever considered worthy of joining one of their clubs after maybe three years of waiting-it will cost you a little fortune.

But why don't you write this, why don't you tell this to Mr. Palmer? I can assure you that he and others know by now the reasons why there are not so many French people interested in golf and why there was a "small gallery" there to greet Mr. Palmer. Don't hiame the French people in general; it wouldn't be fair. Blame the snobs here who don't want golf in France to become a national (Mrs.) T. BAETEL.

St.-Cloud France. The situation of golf in France is getting to be a maiter of which comes first, the clicken or the egg.

The idea of the "French Tournament of Champions" was to promote golf here and to get the French public demanding that fees be lowered—if that can be done-or, more logically, to have public courses built. (There is one in France, a. nine-hole... course...in Normandy).

So the French promoters brought over Palmer and the golfers you would want to pay to see but less than 10,000 paid to see the three-day event and the promotion was a financial flop. Now, if only 10,000 are interested in golf, why build courses?

But then again, if you build courses maybe golf would be-come a national sport and the next time there is a tourney here the French public would be educated enough to understand the sport and they will

Where do you go from here? What comes first, more promotions or more courses? Hopefully, this past weekend did something for golf in France, As always, time will tell. SPORTS EDITOR.

Kidd Sees Bright Future For Status of Pro Skiing

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20 (AP).—Billy Kidd views skiling as one of the fastest rising of professional sports and one that can bring the mountains to the people.

Kidd, 27, turned pro early this year after becoming the first American ever to win a gold medal at the World Championships. He captured the combined events title.

The future of professional skiing has just got to be exciting," Kidd said.

The format of the pro racing circult, with the skiers directing the operation, provides that all money goes into the prizes for competitors, he pointed out. They race slalom and giant slalom. "Many of our races will he on shorter hills than those necessary for downbill races," Kidd explained, "People won't have to go to the big resorts to see the skiing. The courses bring the mountains to the people. The format also calls for a series of match races on an elimination basis instead of just a slalom against time. Thus the viewers see a skier vs. ekier situation.

Kidd also sees the possibility of ski races in such arenas as Madison Square Garden. During the International Ski and Winter Sports Show, which compete on a sloping con-veyor beit-type mechanism that moves uphill. Nine - twenty - three: While looking for the way to my room, became lost in an arboretum of potted palms, I was waylald by a nasty-looking customer in a dinner jacket. He motioned me into a corner, "You are the party who is not having fun," he said, "We don't like it when somebody comes here and doesn't have fun. It makes us feel we don't know our busi-ness." I told him I was sorry I wasn't having any fun. "Sorry isn't good enough," he said "How much did you pay for your air tickets out here?" I told him nearly $300. "Okay," he said. "So you're entitled to at least $300 worth of fun. Get on with it." I said that maybe money couldn't buy fun. He said to go to my room and wait. Ten-fifteen: I had been waiting in my room in a lather of anticipation when the phone rang. 'This is the Federal Bureau of Pun." an official voice said. "We have a report that you told party or parties unnamed that mooey caonot huy

Ten-eighteen: My hag packed, I stuffed pillows under the bed blankets to create an inanimate target, turned off the lights, turned on the TV, and let myself down to the ground via plastic banyan tree outside my balcony.

Ten-forty-three: Arriving at the airport in a convertible I had borrowed, went to airline counter to buy ticket on first flight to anyplace. "There might he R delay," the ticket girl said. "There's R lookout for a man who's not having any fun." I must have moved too rapidly.

"Greh him!" she called. Twelve-twenty a.m.: I was finishing a second brandy and watching 3,000 of the most beautiful girls in America parading around the dazzling Fun Room in a half ounce of nvlon. Five-thirty-two 2.m.: The big man who had been, flown in from Washington by special presidential jet seemed very tired. "How can anyvody who calls himself an American not have fun when he lays out as much money as you have?" I told him I couldn't help myself. I said I wanted to have fun just like everybody on television. I'd even wanted to double my fun. But it was no use. There was no pleasure in enything I had found in Las Vegas. Money didn't seem to buy joy. The big man from Washington came to "These ldiots!" he exclaimed. "Calling me all the way out here for this." He told the local people to let me go, "This dimwit," he said, pointing to me, "thinks that because there's no pleasure in what he's doing, he's not having any fun. He thinks when you're having fun, you ought to be enjoying yourself." The laughter was intense. It rang with the joy of people who weren't having fun for the first

A common symbol of this prececupation, aside from depictions of sexual organs, is the heart, embellished in a variety of ways, including piercing arrows, in which Mr. McLean detects erotic intent.

The Paris School of Graffiti

By Jack Monet

PARIS.—The walls of Paris, so many of them coated with soft. inviting aurfaces of plaster (of Paris, naturally). have always carried messages—even if only the familiar, futile authorized vandalism of the post-no-bills law of "29 Juillet 1881-DEFENSE D'AFFICHER."

Balzac in his novel "Ferragus" complains "of B time when the Rue Pagevin did not have a wall without a foul word." In the 18th century, Restif de La Bre-tonne carved diaries on the walls in Latin and then recorded them with French translations in a book, "My Inscriptlons."

Thus at one time he told the world, elliptically: "5 Jun. Sark apud Lavalette: vidi amatum rivalum. Dolor Nocte," which he translated in his book as: "Sara chez Lavalette. I saw that my rival was loved: my sorrow is without limits. I buroed with fury during the night."

Contemporary Parisian graffiti were examined at length by the photographer Brassai, in a 1933 essay and again in 1961. in between conversations with Picasso, in a hook of photographs. "Graffiti."
"Is there a 'School of Paris' for graffiti?" he asks in the book. "Does tha atmosphere of Paris, so propitious for aristic creation, also extend its beneficial action not only to the 30.000-odd artists, hut even to the children of the streets?

"After having wandered through the quartiers populaires of New York, London, Berlin, Madrid, Rome, Istanbul, Chicago. Rio de Janeiro, etc., I have the impression that Paris is much more rich in graffiti than any other city."

In May-June, 1968, political graffiti overwhelmed the walls in some neighborhoods, and a number of books later reproduced them.

But the biggest study of all on Parlsian graffiti has receotir been completed by a Texan, William McLean. A former painter, who had one-man shows in San Fraucisco and New York, Mr. McLean, 40. came to Paris in 1963, vaguely intending to study art history, but quickly shifted to anthropology.

Late in 1968, the tall, slim intense native of Fort Worth received a doctorate in anthropology from the Sorbonne. His thesis on graffiti followed the principles of the relatively new discipline of semiotics, the study of signs of social life.

He researched the thesis in hundreds of miles of trekking through the streets of Paris, bunting for B new Lascaux or Pompeti. At first he went alone, then with B friend and professional photographer, Clovis Prévost.

A few months ago, he and Mr. Prevost converted tha thesis into a book, "L'Iconographie Populaire de l'Erotisme" (The Erotic Iconography of the People), available only through the publisher, Maisonneuve, 11 Rue Victor-Cousin, 5e, 89 francs (316). Mr. McLean and Mr. Prevost are now winding up a 35-minute film on Parisian graffiti.

As an expert on decorated surfaces, Mr. McLean also has done a five-page article on graffiti (from the Italian, grafflare, to scratch) for the Encyclopaedia Universalis and will do the encyclopedia's entry on tattoos.

The aim of their work, Mr. Prévost says in discussing the film, "is to show that if you take the time to analyze graffiti—which are usually ignored as depredations, trash, degradations-you find that they express the constant pre-occupations of people."

Mr. McLean started his research with the thought that he would disprove the popular notion that graffiti are associated with sex. He didn't.

Major themes that emerge from "pictorial graffit!"-in contrast to "politicalliterary" scribblings, which they did not study—include death (akull and crossbones), identity (initials) and violence (slashes). But the dominant theme, Mr. McLean said, is sexuality, representing half to two-thirds of the pictorial graffiti found.

A common symbol of this preoccupation, aside from depictions of sexual organs, is the heart, embellished in a variety of ways, including piercing arrows, in which Mr. McLean detects erotic intent. Striations, punctures, triangles and other markings also can have erotic overtones, he says in the book, bolstering his argument with excerpts from "adult comic hooks," which have a heavy emphasis on sex and violence.

As another motive for doodling on walls, Mr. McLean points in a footnote to the boastful element in the "Kilroy was here" gesture of the American armies advancing across Europe. Restif de La Bretonne gave as his reason: "I did it with this thought: Will I see this mark again next year? It seems to me, that if I see it again, I will experience a feeling of pleasure, and pleasure is so rare, in the autumn of life, that it is certainly permitted to seek it out."

The best lodes of graffiti in Paris are in the so-called quartiers populaires (that is, poor neighborhoods), where the build-ings, old and in poor condition, give little cause for respect and the walls, covered with plaster or lime mortar, provide a fine medium for the street artist.

Mr. McLean did most of his studies in the 5th Arrondissement (the Latin Quarter) and in the 11th and 20th Arrondissements, north and east of the Place de la Bastille. But graffiti, though less extensive, are also seen in chic neighborhoods. "Pilgrim graffiti" can be found from the roof of Notre Dame to the sewers of Paris.

A "sub-class" of graffiti, or "countergraffiti," adorns advertising posters in the Metro. These graffiti Mr. McLean considers "acts of reprisal" by people outrag-ed by the duplicity of "calculatedly erotic" advertising showing flesh to sell toothpaste.

The variety of graffiti is endless, as Brassai suggests: "One may be as sur-prised as I was to encounter Mexican art at Ménilmontant, the art of the steppes at the Porte des Lilas, pre-Hellenic art st Belleville, that of the Iroquois in the Latin Quarter, or even to discover in other neighborhoods of Paris a Picasso, a 'Miro,' a Blee.'
